

Philip Webb Award 2019 - Notes for Entrants

An annual award from the SPAB for recent graduates and Part II students at UK Schools of Architecture

Chris Hamill - Winner 2018

The SPAB and Philip Webb

Architect Philip Webb and designer, author and craftsman William Morris were the principal founders of the SPAB in 1877. The Society campaigned for the sensitive care and maintenance of old buildings using traditional materials and skills, and set out its distinctive philosophy of 'conservative repair' in a Manifesto, which still guides its work today. From the start, Webb devoted time to encouraging young architects to understand old buildings and appreciate their value, and to teaching them the principles and methods of practical conservation.

The SPAB maintains that educational role today, for example through its Scholarship programme for early-career architects, surveyors and engineers. This Award, named in honour of Webb, is presented annually.

The Competition

Judged by an expert architectural panel, the Philip Webb Award is a design-orientated competition encouraging sympathetic reuse of existing buildings and sensitive new design in an historic context.

It is a unique opportunity for students and architects in the early stages of their career who are interested in sustainability, reuse of old buildings and conservation practice to engage with the SPAB's principles and showcase their skills.

The Brief

To devise a scheme which sympathetically revitalises a historic building of the entrant's choosing, which has decayed or been neglected, but which can be repaired and adapted for a sympathetic new use.

The scheme should incorporate both careful repair of existing fabric and a significant element of new construction in a contemporary design.

The scheme submitted might be a piece of work carried out as part of Part II course work or a project devised specifically for this competition.

- A clear presentation and reasoned explanation of the steps to be taken to conserve and repair existing fabric, demonstrating understanding of repair techniques and materials.
- A convincing statement of the design approach taken to the contemporary interventions proposed to enable the building's reuse.
- Evidence showing how the scheme responds to the SPAB's principles and a clear illustration of how the relationship between the old and the new is managed.
- High standards of presentation in drawings and written material.
